

Creating a policy that will allow for more public radio stations to create a new digital service for its listeners will better serve the public. As a radio station general manager, I often hear from listeners that they like the programming we currently give them, but they also want additional programs that we cannot currently provide to them due to time constraints. With a second digital avenue, we could add additional local programming to better serve our community. Please embrace this opportunity and help us bring more diversity to our audience. Sincerely, Brent Gardner-Smith, Executive Director, Aspen Public Radio
